edQuire, your perfect add-on to your video conferencing tools.

edQuire uses AI to gather and assess student computer usage during a lesson.

A simple colour-coded interface on the teacher's device distinguishes students who are 'on task' and 'off task'. edQuire displays lesson data to support planning and reflective practice, helping to bridge the gap between motivated learning and simple distractions. This is particularly important when teachers are physically distant from their students.

We're Here to Help.

To support schools and families, edQuire is offering our AI learning analytics platform free of charge, until our servers and bandwidth are at capacity. Installation is done remotely via download, so there is no need for physical contact for either the schools or the students.
